2. The ideas and principles maintained by our O. on the subject of government are iden-tical with those taught and defended by the founders of American liberty in the original thirteen States of North America.

3. The ilberties of those 8 ates were assailed by despotle power which simes at their con-quest and subjugation; hence they made com-mon cause for their mutual defence, and esreadom and independence they severally en-tered into a compact estitled the Constitu-tion of the United States of America, for the ends and purposes therein distinctly declared and specified; and the government thereby created was intrasted by the States acting in their several capacities of free and Independ-ent States, with powers sufficient to the secomplishment of those ends and purposes, Enc 11. That the Tressurer of the Supreme Council shall, before entering upon the duties of the office, take the oath required, and give bond in a sum double the amount of funds likely to come into his hands.

6. The Government designated the United States of America has no sovereignty, because that is an attribute belonging to the people in that is an attribute belonging to the people in their respective State organizations, and with which they have not endowed that govern-ment as their common agent. It was by the terms of this compact, constituted by the States, through the express will of the people thereof severally, such common agent to use and exercise certain specified and limited powers. It was anthorized so far as regards powers. It was anthorized so far as regards its status and relatione, as a common agent in the exercise of the powers carefully and jealonely delegated to it, to call itself "supreme" but not "sovereign." Supremacy, as plainly intended by the tenor and splint of article VI. of the Constitution, was created, defined and limited by the Sovereigntless themselves. 7. In accordance with these principles, the Federal Government can exercise only dele-gated power; hence if those who shall have been chosen to admirister that government, shall assume to exercise power not delegated,

Both parties having agreed to the trade at said valuations, the steam boats changed hands.

To the Editors of the Louisville Democrat: GENTLEMEN: Having noticed a letter onr paper of the 31 lustant, from Max Maretzek and others, I deem it an act of jastice that the "musical public" should have both sides of the question. I therefore request you to publish the included reply to said letter. LOUIS TRIPP, Sole Agent of the Weber Plano.

NATIONAL PIANOFORTE ASSOCIATION, March 27, 1865. dessrs. Maretzek, Goldheck, Pattison, Mills Messrs. Maretzek, Goldheck, Pattison, Mills, Thomas and Bergmann:
Genrs: Your letter of the 17th instant was received by me, and in replying to it my first thought is one of recret that gentlemen of your standing in the musical world should so far demean your selves in your zeal for the sustenance of the waning popularity of a certain planoforte manufacturer as to publish in the public prints a statement of which the substance is a direct and apparently wilfull falsehood. The constitution which you signed was of the National Planoforte Association, and its object was declared to be, "To enable each of its subscribers to purchase a planoforte of the best manufacturers on a credit of such length as may be desired, at the lowest market price, and to pay for the instrument by installments."

the instrument by installments."

I did not ask your assistance to establish a "Conservatory of Music," for I did not and do not need your assistance for that purpose, and the untruthful nature of your assertion is manifest from the fact that the Constitution of the National Conservators are the conservators

The Conservatory, now in the third month of eration, numbers nearly one thousand pupils, tended to be, as its name implies, a Nation inservatory, and no names will be invited to it of directors except they he above the hilbery list of directors except they he above the hribery of free accommodations in marble fronted buildings or other hire which it may be in the power of any wealthy mannfacturer to bestow.

I wish it distinctly understood, both by year-selves and the public, that none of the gentlemen whose names I have written at the head of this epistle is connected in any way, directly or indirectly, with the National Conservatory; for, while I cannot do otherwise than feel pity for those leliow artists who are willing to allow their names to be subscribed to an untruth for the benefit of a business firm whose piano has been placed for months alongside the Weber plano, and by the decision of the visitors to our wareroom almost invariably pronounced inferior to not only the Weber, but to other manufacturers, whose pretensions are more moderate than those of Mr. Albert Weber, I feel too much interest for the welfare of the National Conservatory to be willing to have its pood nuenced by the interests of any pianoforte or other manufacturer.

The names of the officers, directors and trustees of the Conservatory will be made public so soon as perfected, and the gentlemen so connected may well cherish a landable pride on account of their connection with an institution whose hemails are already so great and so widely diffused, and which promises fairly to become the greatest music shoel in the world.

The original draft of the constitution of the National Planoforte Association, which was signed by you, is still in my possession, and may be consulted by any one interested in the matter, at the wareroom of the Association, No. 30, Cooper Institute.

New York, April 5. The Herald's correspondent has the following account of the operations on Sunday: At midright Sain:day General Wilcox had orders to demonstrate on the right of the line, so as to draw the rebels from the left prepar-atory to operations in that quarter. The next morning Admiral Porter and all the artillery in the works were also set at work, and Wilcox's ckirmish line was advanced. The rebels were aroused, and aron sharp volleys of muskery were heard, indicating that they were at work. Amid the pol e and smoke of the skirmish they pushed on till reaching the ou skirts Petersburg, when they met a heavy body of rebels cavancing upon them. A brick en-gagement followed, but our numbers were so small that we were compelled to withdraw. Wilcox then get orders to attack Fort Malone on the left, and he massed a column for that purpose. While this was being done shall redispositi we were making inriber to the left, and a system of common signals had been screed upon, to fix the moment of starting, the all might assault simul anounty

Nine guns were found in the foreand quickly. trained and se, at were emoying the robe haveries. The wint the simulaneous opera-tions in ther to the left, on the rebellene in two, took from them their commanding p thou and a large norman of valuable art ley.

Scarcely were we quest in possession of the fort when the rebels, having reorganized that is present of ments, came up with a determined effort to reiske it. They made a desperale assault, resisting man-ulv agerast the terrific discharges of grape, catister, and withering voileys of muckery; but it was to no purpose. Four times during the day did they attempt to retake this im-portant work; but were ach time cent recling back in disorder, losing heavily each time.

It was in one of there assaults that the reb i

Gen. A. P. Hill lost his life, seeking in person to lead his men up to the works. Meantime to lead his men up to the works. Meantime the Sixth and Twenty-fourth corps having breken through the rebel lives in their front, were awang around to their rear and coming down both upon the rear and flack, it was evident Petersburg was lost to the rebellion.
The movements of the Sixth corps were so rapid, that Gen. Lee himself narrowly escaped capture. As it was, his headquarters fell into

The Tribure's correspondent thus recounts the operations on our left: At 4;30 on Sunday the Sixth corps left its lives to attack the enemy's left center. It moved in echellon, so as to enable the corps to throw forward its left and flank on the works of the enemy, one after another. a battery of four gues opened upon the First division, but by a rapid charge of the First brigade it was insuediately captured. The batteries of the enemy now opened from every point, but on went our braves. The left soon reached some works in their front, and one by one they fell into our hands. At 10:30 a grand picture of war presented itself The line of corpe, with its left in ad-Tamee, was sweeping on towards two heavy forts. The rebels fired their guns vigorously, and shells burst thickly over our line. On pushed the left division until it struck the South Side railroad; and against the two forts swept the Second sivision. Our stillery fired upon the forts, from commanding positions, increasantly, until our men were closs up to them. Then a dash was made upon the works, but it was repulsed. Again it was tried, and this time it met with success; but so resolute were the rebais inside that some of them used the bayonet for a short time.

As these works fell into our hands a loud cheer rent the sir, and the enemy were seen bastlly retiring to their second line, which opened sharply in an effort to stay our advance. About this time Sheridan appeared on the field, and was received with loud cheers by the Sixth corps, who look up to him with great respect. At the same moment our entire line was changing its long front to the right, and slowly before it the broken line of the enemy was falling back upon their rear defenses. Against the line which fell back defenses. Against the line which fell back heavy force was now pitted, composed of parts of the Twenty-tourin, Sixth and Twenty-inh corps, and nearly all fresh troops. A lull took place when the force was ready to move. and it was plain that a distinct action was t be fought. Dusk stole over the scene, and the attack was deferred for next 63y. While the above fighting was taking place the 5th corps and cavary under Sheridan turned the right wing of the rebel army, taking from 400 to 500 prisoners. The 25 corps, connecting with the right of the 5:h was also victorious, notwithstanding they had, perhaps, the roughest ground to fight over, and a brave and determined foe in the rebet 31 corps. The time of delenses in front of the 9th corps was stronger town those at any the var corps was brought town target any other point; it delivered many assume during the day and suffered severely at right and found itself close up to the main line of the defenses, but unable to go turnber.
